ROTTER & NOHL

WENDER is mentioned in the detailed interrogation reports of NOHL and ROTTER. He informed ROTTER in a conversation that a Russian unit was looking for WIENINGER with regard to the GEFROERNER-SCHWARTZ deal. After WENDER's release from prison (he was arrested in August 1944) he lived in GEFROERNER's apartment and was arrested by the Russians while they were looking for GEFROERNER. WENDER then worked for this Russian unit from April to July 1945, in Vienna, St Poelton and Amstetten. One day WENDER met ROTTER in the street and told her that WIENINGER was in safety in upper Austria. WENDER had a card in English and German indicating that he was working for the American Red Cross in Vienna; he had moved from GEFROERNER's apartment.

SFX

Security of subj - willingness to discuss business with Gross re mission for Roman, contact with Earle, etc., betrayal of Gefronner to Russians and willingness to serve anyone who approached him with mission. Subj appears typical professional agent and no more reliable than most of that stamp. Little reason to assume he can be trusted further than his own immediate interests lie or would maintain confidence any longer than it is to his immediate profit to do so. Contact and use of subj sh'd be predicated on this basis.

He undertook this journey, but turned himself over to the British upon his arrival in Syria, and was later used by them on various operational intelligence assignments. During 1943 Subject was arrested in Budapest for high treason, transferred to the custody of the Vienna Gestapo in March 1944 and liberated by the Russians in April 1945. It is claimed that Subject still receives financial support from the British for services rendered. No further details could be ascertained.
